“ Our family moved to Owasso in 1978, a year after the Barhams. We first came to know them as customers at the Super H grocery store. That's where I worked with Jerry Jr, and Tara, before they dated, married and started their family. Our kids and the Barham kids all attended school in Owasso and probably shared a few classes. Some of my family and the Bahamas sat near each other and would visit before and during home football games. We think of them from time to time and always enjoy the memories. We were unable to attend the services for Jerry but wish to express our condolences to the entire family. Our thoughts and prayers are with the Barham family today.

“ When I was about eight years old (Jerry would have been about seventeen), we were at a family gathering on a Sunday afternoon. Jerry drove some old Ford like a Fairlane or a Galaxy. Anyway, he took some white shoe polish with a sponge applicator and wrote on the windshield a bunch of made up "race results" times to make it appear he had raced his car the night before. We all loaded up in his car (my brother Richard age 12, cousin Jimmy age 10, I don't know who else) and we went cruising at some local drive in. On that day, I was the coolest eight year old on the block.
