“The memories of Brian Wright for me always start with one important fact: I’m an Oklahoma Sooners fan... and Brian was a Texas Longhorns fan. That meant football season wasn’t just football season — it was open season for heckling each other.

One particular time, Brian and I were at a pool hall in Tulsa, shooting pool, having a great time, and watching my beloved Sooners on the big screen. Unfortunately, we lost (hey, it happens). “Horns Down, always!” I told him... trying to save face.

What I didn’t realize — and what turned out to be a much bigger problem than the loss — was that I had ridden with Brian to the pool hall. Which meant I was now trapped for 30 minutes in a moving vehicle with Brian... and if you knew him, you knew he could be a full-blown Cerebral Assassin. He didn’t waste a single second. For the entire ride, he served up his special recipe of slow-burn humor, sarcasm, and perfectly timed digs... and I was the main course.

Fast forward to another big game — this time I had to listen to it on the radio because we were in Texas for a family event. And yes, once again, the Sooners lost... to those dang Longhorns. And yes, once again, I was riding with Brian. But this wasn’t just 30 minutes. Oh no... this was all the way from Fort Worth back to Owasso. Brian was in full victory mode — basically a one-man sports radio show, part play-by-play, part roast, and 100% relentless.

Brian, you are missed and counted, my friend. Fly high... and “Hook ‘em Horns,” buddy — signed, BOOMER SOONER!!!!
