“ We weren’t close friends, but we worked together for nearly two years. I was new, inexperienced, and you were easily the kindest, funniest, and most helpful co-worker I’ve ever had. I moved towns shortly after you found a new place to work, but I never forgot about you, how laid-back you seemed, and how you wore your heart on your sleeve. I always thought about reaching out to see how you were, because your kindness and hardworking skill was something I still aspire to. It broke my heart to hear about what happened. I truly wish you knew how loved and appreciated you were. I never took it lightly when you shared your struggles with us, even if you did it with humor, but deep down I always hoped you could find your peace. You touched so many peoples’ lives for the better, Chris. The world is not the same without you!

“ I miss you and think of you daily. The world has fallen apart without you, you were someone who was smarter than the rest of us. Confident and always was so sure about what to do. My heart still breaks repeatedly without you here with us. You truly were a marvel, I wish you understood how important you truly are to us and the lives you touched. I stay forever grateful I got to know you and be apart of your journey and you a massive part of mine. I love you and miss you brother - always.

“ 2 months have come and gone without you. The pain of losing you has not subsided. I miss you everyday - think of you everyday. Your smile, your laugh. The comfort and joy you brought to every moment. You are truly an amazing man who had so many talents and abilities that brought everyone together. You deserved so much more in life. You were so much smarter than you gave yourself credit. So much wiser through life than anyone I will ever get to know, especially for being so young. The family feels and carries the loss of you like our hearts are missing. No words will ever be enough to express how much we love you. How much we miss you and how beyond grateful we are for getting what time we got with you, to be apart of our family. You will always be my brother and I will never stop wishing you were here with us.

“ Me And Chris hanging out before a party started- just us And he keeps squaring up with me to "shadow box" as he "accidentally" punches me in the teeth 2 separate times.. only a few ppl in this world I'd let that slide with.. he was 1 of them.. my brother! I miss you bro, it's been a month and I'm up at 3:45am just thinking about you and missing you. I've cried almost every day and I'm sure you would have something slick to say about that but it hurts. I didn't go to your celebration of life, I got dressed for it I started crying I turned off my phone and went to sleep. I don't want to accept it, I know part of you will always be with me. All the memories I have of you,, remember when you and Chase moved in with me and chase hit the gas meter twice in 1 night lol.. yall are both gone now and to be honest part of me is gone too cause yall took some of me with yall... I won't be 100 again until i catch up with yall on the next journey.
Love u bro

“ I worked with Chris at lowes. He was one of my department managers. Chris was an extremely hard worker and always had a smile on his face. I really loved working with him because he had such a great attitude. Chris wil be missed by many. My thoughts and prayers are with his family.

“ I used to think I couldn't go a day without your smile. Without telling you things and hearing your voice back. Then, the day arrived and it was so unbearably hard but the next day was harder. And I knew with a sinking feeling it was going to get worse and I wasn't going to be okay for a long time, or ever again. Because losing someone, especially you my love, isn't an occasion or an event. It doesn't just happen once. It happens over and over again. I lose you every time I pick up your favorite coffee mug; whenever that one song plays on the radio, or when I discover your old t-shirt at the bottom of our laundry pile. I lose you every time I think of kissing you, holding you or wanting you. I go to bed at night and lose you, when I wish I could tell you about my day. And in the morning, when I wake and reach for the empty space across the sheets, I begin to lose you all over again.

“ Christopher was always ready to be serious when he needed to be, but was ALWAYS ready to make you laugh. He was the provider of good times, and such a wonderful father to his kids. Watching him live was the greatest gift I ever received, but he never let his guard down in any situation, he was a protector to all who needed one. His laugh was infectious. You could never lose him in a crowd of people due to his height, also you could never lose him because he could find you. He was passionate about having good times and living life to the fullest. Watching him play and spend time with his children was inspiring, you couldn't help but let his love for them flood your own heart. He always let it be known when he came home, or heard you through the phone just to yell HEY! He was also such a strong and loving provider for his family who wanted to help them walk a path of happiness, to watch and help them succeed in their passions. He cherished sentimental moments, even ones you thought had no meaning and he was just being goofy, they meant a lot to him. I will think about him everyday. I will miss him everyday. I shall carry him in my memories forever. He played the biggest impact on my life and I will never be more grateful and proud that he allowed me into his life. Into his heart. I will never forget what you taught me or what you have done for me. He will always be my big brother in my heart. Though we weren't blood related, he never let that stop his love he so kindly shared. I miss you and I always will. You will live on in my heart and through the stories/times we shared. I love you so much. I know I will see you again, though the time waiting until then will be the hardest. I know you would want me to make you proud, be tough and live with no regrets. Living to the fullest that life has to offer us. My best friend. My Big Brother. My family.
