“ During one of my most recent visits with Jerry and Shirley, I had the opportunity to just sit and visit with Jerry for a while. I asked him some questions about his life. He told me about his experience in the Navy. He also told me that he broadcasting on the air when the news came to the radio station that President Kennedy had been shot. I encouraged him to write some of these experiences down for his children and grandchildren to have. I hope he did that, because he lived an interesting life.

Jerry was a humble and remarkable person. He always welcomed me into there home. He would go busy himself reading or working on his computer, because he wanted to make sure Shirley and I had time together. I loved him and will miss him.
