“ I remember when you and I weren't such good friends and then you apologized to me and we became friends and rode to Tulsa Tech together some times. I'm glad we had made up because I hated confrontations and I knew you were just hacking on me as it were. You had an infectious laugh and made people around you better for knowing the real you. Thank you for being a good friend when I was going through a very difficult time. Rest easy, brother!
